

Acknowledgment

This book is a joint product of the United Nations Development Program (UNDP), politicians and their supporters, and academicians. The UNDP supported this research through the Public Governance Forum (PGF), which is co-managed by the Center for Social Policy and Public Affairs and the School of Government of the Ateneo de Manila University. I am grateful to these institutions for their administrative support.

The discourse presented in this book has been greatly enriched by the contributions of the two politician-authors, Lutgardo B. Barbo and Nereus Acosta. With much patience and dedication, they wrote (and rewrote) their chapters despite the riveting demands of their political careers. As the book was taking shape, Barbo found himself secretary of a Senate wrestling with the impeachment of former President Joseph Ejercito Estrada. Acosta willingly interrupted his hectic campaign for a second term as Bukidnon Congressman to discuss his chapter during a public presentation at the Ateneo de Manila.

I wish to thank the members of the Ateneo de Manila University academic community for their intellectual and moral support. University President Rev. Bienvenido F. Nebres, SJ, wrote the Foreword. Manuscript readers Rev. Jose Cecilio Magadia, SJ, Executive Director of the Center for Social Policy and Public Affairs, and Benjamin Tolosa, Jr., Chair of Ateneo's Political Science Department, provided insightful advice on how to improve significantly the original draft of this work. Henedina Razon-Abad, Executive Director of the School of Government organized the focus group discussion among Congressional spouses and encouraged Acosta's participation in the book-writing team. Jose Ignatius Pagsanghan and Errol Leones, project director and manager, respectively, of the PGF, ironed out administrative procedures. Valuable research assistance came from Mira Ofreneo, Katharine Nazareno and Cristina Antonio.

To all, thank you for your help.

- Cristina Jayme Montiel